

Please contact Jennifer M. Pavlik, NCIDQ, Principal and Interior Design Practice Leader, to start a conversation about how our Strategic ArchitectureSM approach can be used to evaluate incorporating these post COVID-19 planning principles and concepts into your space.

PLANNING & DESIGN STRATEGIES FOR A POST COVID-19 WORKPLACE RESET

DLA+ ARCHITECTURE & INTERIOR DESIGN's Strategic ArchitectureSM approach is a value-driven process for design decision making wherein value is broadly defined to include the goals and priorities of an organization from costs and schedule to culture, brand and the user experience. In the wake of the COVID-19 crisis, all of us are adapting our priorities to focus on health and wellbeing more so than ever before. Our workplace design experts have been developing best practices for reopening and sustaining a safe and healthy environment for our return to the office. Whether the office is in commercial, sports, government or educational facilities, planning principles and design concepts need to focus on:

- + Employee safety and wellbeing – ensure your team is comfortable returning to the workplace.
- + Corporate culture – adapt to the current situation while staying true to your mission and brand.
- + Floorplate density – de-densify and maximize utilization while mitigating risk.
- + Creative partitioning – provide safe separation without sacrificing community.
- + Flexibility – keep up with quickly evolving post COVID demands.
- + Adaptability – prepare for the long-term implications.

The DLA+ Workplace Design Team is at the ready to help you address these new priorities with innovative and customized solutions.

PITTSBURGH | CHARLOTTE

www.DLApplus.com